

A Friendly Battle

by Katie Clark

Chris raced from his bedroom to the kitchen. The rest of the family stood around the table, but it was not time for supper.

Dad held a rectangular box. Mom held a platter of snacks. Chris' sister, Kate, held a pen and paper.

"It's my turn to go."

They all sat in the kitchen. Dad took the box and pulled out a board game. Mom placed the game pieces on the board.

It was time for the friendly battle. It was their favorite game.

Chris drew the first card. Mom and Dad went next.

When Chris got to the end of the board, he was three spaces ahead. Kate got to go next.

Chris ate popcorn and drank a glass of fruity ice water.

Now it was Mom's turn. She drew her card. "Seven spaces," she said. She moved her game piece.

One, two, three, four, five, six, seven.

Mom grinned. Her piece landed on the winning game square. Mom was the winner of the friendly battle!
