goals for America, including ending the tensions left over from the Korean conflict and the Cold War. He also felt compassion for the Civil Rights movement, which was becoming a huge issue within the country.

The president's biggest challenges included tensions with the Soviet Union and Cuba. A failed mission to overthrow the communist government in Cuba was a major disappointment for him.

However, he was able to calm the waters with the Soviet Union. Another of his great victories was the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which gave African Americans the same rights as white Americans. He called civil rights "the greatest moral issue of our time."

He called civil rights "the greatest moral issue of our time." He called discrimination. This was a major step towards equal access to public areas.

However, President Kennedy was not fully fulfilled. On November 22, 1963, he was shot in Dallas, Texas. He was the first President to be assassinated. They were both fatal, and he died that same day.

President Kennedy was awarded the Medal of Honor for his life. For his heroic actions, he was awarded the Medal of Honor. He was the first President to be awarded the Medal of Honor.

He wrote a book titled Profiles In Courage, which won a Pulitzer Prize in 1957. He spoke one of the most-remembered quotes in history during his inaugural speech in 1961. He said, "Ask not what your country can do for you - ask what you can do for your country".
