The goose had lost his flute near the cave.

There came the crane and the duck, the drake and the duckling. "Goosey Goose?"

Oh, it's my flute, I lost it near the cave.

Let's go to the cave and look for it.

The goose climbed the tree and found it.

The crane was in the tree and found it. "I found it," said he. He climbed down and found it.

The crane and the duck, the drake and the duckling were on the bike looking for the flute.

On the way, they met the drake who was eating his cake and the duck who was slurping her juice. They wanted to help too.

Five on a bike, they went mile after mile, looking for the flute in every pile.

After hours, they came back home to find the mouse play the flute in its hole.
