

It's Like Riding A Bike

by Katie Clark

Underline the similes in the story and use them in sentences.

Nathan buckled the strap of his bicycle helmet and pulled on his elbow and knee pads. He was ready to try out his new ramp which he had received for his birthday.

Bella and Christopher, two kids who lived down the street, stood in the crowd. The ramp hung in the air like a fan blowing in Nathan's face.

Nathan climbed the ramp at maximum speed. The ramp sat up behind his face. It felt like he was riding a fan.

The ramp sat up behind his back tire followed. The ramp hit the ground.

Nathan kept pedaling and shouted and clapped like an expert biker.

He made the jump like a fan. She put the bicycle for Bella to have a turn. She put on the helmet and pads, and she took her turn. Christopher went next.

They all made their jumps successfully. Nathan loved his new bicycle ramp. He felt as awesome as the coolest kid in town.

At last, it was time for Bella and Christopher to go home. They promised to return tomorrow for more bike riding. Nathan couldn't wait!
